

Modifications not acceptable in constitution

By Zabihana Noori

A number of members of the Taliban group in southern Afghanistan believe that following and observing legal criteria written in the country's constitution are not acceptable in intra-Afghan talks in Qatar. They have also expressed their concern over the current condition of the country in comparison with Islamic Shari'ah. Zabihana Noori, a member of the Taliban group in southern Afghanistan, says that it is not clear that Taliban should give up their position in contradiction to Islamic Shari'ah or not, while the current condition of Afghanistan is maintaining human rights and Islamic rights and no religious scholar has commented that it is contradictory with Islamic Shari'ah.

Head of Afghanistan High Council for National Reconstruction, the Ashraf Ghani, in his recent remarks has said that respecting the rights of Afghan citizens and the country's constitution particularly, are not to be discussed until the peace talks are 75 percent of the country's politicians are respecting the principles and values.

Afghanistan government negotiating team will deal the political rights of Afghan citizens, republic and current freedoms in talks with the Taliban group in Qatar. Regarding the country's constitution, President Mohammad Ashraf Ghani has repeatedly said that it would be a major deal in peace talks with the Taliban.

He is a flexible and inflexible and it's the country's parliament that has the authority to bring modifications, which is infeasible situation, conditions are higher and it is not the Loya Jirga that can bring modifications rather than a particular organ or person, therefore, the country's constitution is considered as an inflexible law that is not accepting flexibility at all.

Afghanistan government officials believe that following and observing legal criteria written in the country's constitution are not acceptable in intra-Afghan talks in Qatar. They have also expressed their concern over the current condition of the country in comparison with Islamic Shari'ah. Zabihana Noori, a member of the Taliban group in southern Afghanistan, says that it is not clear that Taliban should give up their position in contradiction to Islamic Shari'ah or not, while the current condition of Afghanistan is maintaining human rights and Islamic rights and no religious scholar has commented that it is contradictory with Islamic Shari'ah.

Head of Afghanistan High Council for National Reconstruction, the Ashraf Ghani, in his recent remarks has said that respecting the rights of Afghan citizens and the country's constitution particularly, are not to be discussed until the peace talks are 75 percent of the country's politicians are respecting the principles and values.

Afghanistan government negotiating team will deal the political rights of Afghan citizens, republic and current freedoms in talks with the Taliban group in Qatar. Regarding the country's constitution, President Mohammad Ashraf Ghani has repeatedly said that it would be a major deal in peace talks with the Taliban.

He is a flexible and inflexible and it's the country's parliament that has the authority to bring modifications, which is infeasible situation, conditions are higher and it is not the Loya Jirga that can bring modifications rather than a particular organ or person, therefore, the country's constitution is considered as an inflexible law that is not accepting flexibility at all.

Peace in Afghanistan means peace & stability in region

By Nurraza Rahmatou

Following the start of intra-Afghan talks between Afghanistan government and Taliban in Qatar, a number of regional countries have declared their support for the talks. The Taliban group in southern Afghanistan, however, says that it is not clear that Taliban should give up their position in contradiction to Islamic Shari'ah or not, while the current condition of Afghanistan is maintaining human rights and Islamic rights and no religious scholar has commented that it is contradictory with Islamic Shari'ah.

Head of Afghanistan High Council for National Reconstruction, the Ashraf Ghani, in his recent remarks has said that respecting the rights of Afghan citizens and the country's constitution particularly, are not to be discussed until the peace talks are 75 percent of the country's politicians are respecting the principles and values.

Afghanistan government negotiating team will deal the political rights of Afghan citizens, republic and current freedoms in talks with the Taliban group in Qatar. Regarding the country's constitution, President Mohammad Ashraf Ghani has repeatedly said that it would be a major deal in peace talks with the Taliban.

He is a flexible and inflexible and it's the country's parliament that has the authority to bring modifications, which is infeasible situation, conditions are higher and it is not the Loya Jirga that can bring modifications rather than a particular organ or person, therefore, the country's constitution is considered as an inflexible law that is not accepting flexibility at all.

2020 Afghanistan Conference and the path to peace, prosperity

KABUL - The 2020 Afghanistan Conference scheduled for 23-24 November 2020 in Geneva is a milestone event in Afghanistan's journey to peace, prosperity and self-reliance.

The quadilateral international level dialogue conference is jointly organized by the Government of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, the Government of Finland and the United Nations. The main objective of the conference is to coordinate development cooperation efforts for the benefit of all Afghans, said Edelmar Lorenz, the UN Secretary-General's Special Representative for Afghanistan.

"I think looking forward to the development of Afghanistan, we need to work together on a vision for the future of Afghanistan that is realistic and well-sequenced. Investment in peace and development are essential prerequisites for the recovery of Afghanistan," Lorenz said.

The UN Secretary-General's Special Representative for Afghanistan, Edelmar Lorenz, says that the UN is committed to working with the Afghan Government, Finland, and the donor community to deliver the best possible outcome for the benefit of all Afghans.

The UN Secretary-General's Special Representative for Afghanistan, Edelmar Lorenz, says that the UN is committed to working with the Afghan Government, Finland, and the donor community to deliver the best possible outcome for the benefit of all Afghans.

The UN Secretary-General's Special Representative for Afghanistan, Edelmar Lorenz, says that the UN is committed to working with the Afghan Government, Finland, and the donor community to deliver the best possible outcome for the benefit of all Afghans.

Why polio continues to be a health risk in Afghanistan, Pakistan

KABUL - After Africa was declared polio-free last month, Afghanistan and Pakistan are now the only countries in the world where the disease is found. While it is rare in Afghanistan, it has not yet been eliminated in Pakistan and that can be one day in Kabul.

Dr. Anissa Khan, an Islamabad-based researcher in infectious disease and public health, says that government in one of the regions behind the failure of Pakistan's polio eradication program.

While it is rare in Afghanistan, it has not yet been eliminated in Pakistan and that can be one day in Kabul. Dr. Anissa Khan, an Islamabad-based researcher in infectious disease and public health, says that government in one of the regions behind the failure of Pakistan's polio eradication program.

Dr. Anissa Khan, an Islamabad-based researcher in infectious disease and public health, says that government in one of the regions behind the failure of Pakistan's polio eradication program.

Dr. Anissa Khan, an Islamabad-based researcher in infectious disease and public health, says that government in one of the regions behind the failure of Pakistan's polio eradication program.

Dr. Anissa Khan, an Islamabad-based researcher in infectious disease and public health, says that government in one of the regions behind the failure of Pakistan's polio eradication program.

Dr. Anissa Khan, an Islamabad-based researcher in infectious disease and public health, says that government in one of the regions behind the failure of Pakistan's polio eradication program.

Dr. Anissa Khan, an Islamabad-based researcher in infectious disease and public health, says that government in one of the regions behind the failure of Pakistan's polio eradication program.

months in the government suspended nationwide polio vaccination between April and July to help contain the outbreak. The UN Secretary-General's Special Representative for Afghanistan, Edelmar Lorenz, says that the UN is committed to working with the Afghan Government, Finland, and the donor community to deliver the best possible outcome for the benefit of all Afghans.

The UN Secretary-General's Special Representative for Afghanistan, Edelmar Lorenz, says that the UN is committed to working with the Afghan Government, Finland, and the donor community to deliver the best possible outcome for the benefit of all Afghans.

The Kabul Times