

Poland: High inflation to persist, central bank gearing towards hikes

A solid H2H reduced monthly inflation rate of 0.1% in June, reflecting manufacturing activity. A fall in energy prices, however, is not expected to materialize in the near term, as inflation remains high. The central bank is expected to raise its key rate in Q2, alongside the rest of the world. The bank's stance is expected to be more hawkish than in the past, as inflation remains high.
